PERRY LEARNARD DEAD

Perry B. Learnard, formerly of this place, who was with the United army during the Civil war, died at the county hospital at Port Collins, Colo., Tuesday evening, March 25, 1926, at the age of seventy-eight years. He suffered a stroke at his home, 508 S. Howe street, Madison, and that night was taken to the county hospital.

Deceased, a brother of the late H. B. Learnard, was born November 1, 1847, at Port Collins, Va., and followed his company B, 20th Wisconsin Infantry, volunteers January 4, 1862, at the age of fourteen. He was listed as a musician, and he also served as musketeer in Company E, 22nd Wisconsin Infantry. He was honorably discharged at Brownsville, Texas, March 15, 1868. During the war he was in several battles.

He came to Port Collins in early days, and was a member there of the Thomas Post U. A. R. and of the local Mazomanie lodge. He was for some years agent for the American Railway Express Company.

Mr. Learnard leaves no relatives at Port Collins. The only relative known to friends being Mrs. Ida Ellis, of Nepeel, S. D., a sister. Mrs. Ellis arrived at Port Collins Thursday afternoon, and her son, Donald, a student at Denver, arrived Tuesday. The funeral was held from H. B. Learnard's residence, Friday afternoon. Masonic services were held at the grave.

A twin brother of Mr. Learnard, Porter E. Learnard, and Mr. Learnard's wife are buried at Port Collins.

A. M. PARKMINE ON DRY LAW

Our old friend, A. M. Parkmine, writing from Tempe, Calif., to the Mazomanie, Minn. Press, discusses the dry law and other subjects in his usual successful manner.

Here are some excerpts from the letter:

I see there is a good deal of talk about amending the 18th Amendment. Every Senator is advising it. I do not see how any rational person can advocate such a thing. I do not like anyone but a fool or a rascal would do so. A person is not to be taken off to what they do not know, but are fools if they do not try to learn. If God had intended us to drink liquor he would have created a source of it, and whiskey is a heavy traveler nearly all over the United States and I have never seen any or heard of any.

I have seen liquor used for 26 years that I can remember and I have never seen anything but poverty and suffering from the effects of using it. Some poor, weak-minded ignorant creature says their liberties are being taken away from them.

Some women, I am sorry to say, advocate the use of it. I think if they were tied to a drunken brute for a year they would change their mind.

A drunken brute and a politician are a good deal alike. I remember in 1867 there was a lady going through Salt Lake City and she stopped at what was a Mormon friend and found out the ways of the Mormons. She wished to see and talk with Webster Bushel. He was one of the 12 Apostles and was supposed to be the boss politician. She asked him if he thought that a man with so many women and children had the same love and respect for them as a man with one wife and family. His answer was "As much love and respect as a bull has for his calves."

We do not want to fight intolerance only, but other corruption.

What has Congress done the last three months? formed the World Court and settled with Italy and lowered the interest on those that are able to pay taxes and ought to pay. I sold a farm a while ago in Wisconsin for $10,000 and the law is there if a man paid me $1,000 he would have to pay tax on my $20,000. I look it at Minnesota and there could get it out the years by paying $500 a year. That is common, and lowering taxes with a vengeance. How long are the people going to allow this thing to run?

How many Sunday automobile accidents are due to people harrasing to church.

OBITUARY

ROY A. WIGHTMAN

Roy A. Wightman, youngest of the six children of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wightman, was born in Richland Center, July 8, 1862, and died at a hospital in St. Helena, Oregon, March 28, 1926. When Roy was two years of age, his parents moved to what is now the George Liss home on the town of Mazomanie, and there Roy spent his childhood and youth, attending the district school until he was qualified to enter the daily school of the College of Agriculture in Madison. After completing the course in Butter-making, he spent several years in this work in different places in Wisconsin: first at Mounds Creek, and later in Mayville, Onondaga, and at Springfield Corners.

In the spring of 1908, he received an offer from a firm in Portland, Oregon, and went to the far west to resume work in his chosen calling; but the dampness of the climate as well as that connected with the work in the creamery, induced a serious rheumatic condition which compelled him to give up this line of work. Later he spent two years in the employ of the Swift Packing Co. in San Francisco, hoping the change would be beneficial to his health. After this period, he returned to Portland, Oregon, and was employed by the Ford Assembling Plant in that city, a period of several years. The condition of his health compelled him to try places of different elevation in California and Oregon in the hope of being benefited, but whatever relief was received was only temporary and at last the call of the Master, "Come unto me and I will give you rest" was heard and the weary soul was freed from the pain-ridden body and went home for good and all his wanderings, he did not drift beyond his love and care.

Roy Wightman was married in March, 1908, to Miss Thelma Phillips of Springfield Corners, who preceded him in death in 1913. His last visit back to his Wisconsin home was made in 1912.

The death of this member of the family to doubly hard to bear following as it does, so closely that of the mother who was laid to rest in December, 1925. One brother, Arthur, was with Roy during the last days of his life and helped to lay the remains tenderly away in their last home. Interment was made in the cemetery at St. Helena, Oregon, under charge of the services.

Of a quiet, somewhat reserved nature, the character of Roy Wightman attracted to him those whom he met, and he gained their respect, and kept their warm friendship. He leaves to mourn the loss of life in the prime of manhood, two brothers, Arthur, of Bend, Oregon, and Roy, of Canada, three sisters, Mrs. George Bywater, of Johnson, S. D., and Misses Minnie and May, of this place, besides many other relatives and friends.

The son of Dr. for him has set. We know not why. We only know 'tis best.

DOWN UPON THE SWANEE RIVER

There are probably no more familiar words in the old-fashioned tales of the river of southern Foster's level old song flows dreamily through one of the most delightful of the new crop of action pictures. The production unit that made the photograph went to the far South and to the actual Swanee River and its country the vicinity for the entire system.

There is in it the drama and poetry, the laughter and the tears; that one would expect to see in a picture. The waving grass, the misty, the fog, the sad and faithful negro who was the epitome of faithfulness, the pretty girl and her gallant lover—all

A TRULY GREAT BIG POWERFUL PICTURE

"Three Faces East"

with
JETTA GOUDAL ROBERT AMES
HENRY B. WALTHALL and CLIVE BROOK

By all odds one of the best Secret Service mystery pictures of the world that has yet been made for the screen. Not for many years has there been a picture produced like this.

Facing each other with drawn revolvers, the menace of death in their eyes, they fall into each other's arms! Enemies by reason of war, they are friends and brothers because of their college comradeship.

A mysterious leak in the War Office—a hidden wireless used by German spies to transmit information to the Imperial headquarters—the safety of the Allied Cause demanded that they be located—how was it to be done?

A German nurse, mysteriously affiliated with the British, parading under an alias—a safe containing important documents which Kaiser Wilhelm would pay a King's ransom to possess—a determined spy for whom Scotland Yard is searching—all pawns of Destiny in a great game of war and hearts.

I promise you one of the best pictures in "Three Faces East" that you have ever seen, and I'll make good that promise by refunding your money if you are not satisfied. Tell your friends and neighbors what you think of it.—E. C. Accola.

By Edward Krenner, Director, Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Experiment Station

This is the sixth of a series of articles about Wisconsin institutions, resources, industries and people.

Many important drug plants are grown in Wisconsin. As the fur has been given way to the drug hunter, so the latter has given way to the farmer. The woods and prairie abounding in native medicinal plants have been replaced by fields of grain and pastures for cattle.

Golden seal, seventy-five years ago a "drug of the Cincinnati market" at two and one-half cents per pound, has in recent years sold at two and one-half dollars. Ginseng is valued above artificial shade, awarded to watch dog, the shot gun, and electrical contrivances.

The crude drugs of the past were often crude, indeed, as they passed from the hands of the drug hunter to those of the cross road general store in exchange for powder and shot, not to mention whiskey. It cannot be said that they were improved as the store keeper passed them along.

It is in the early part of the seventeenth century the golden trade with China was all but ruined because of improper curing, history has many a time repeated itself in this respect. Since stramonium, or low alkaloid content, was practically the only drug of its kind in the early part of this century, the United States Pharmacopoeia changed its standard in order to protect the pharmaceutical manufacturer. Ginseng roots loaded with shot and scales of narsacophyllin loaded with stones are some of the crudest methods employed by the drug hunter and dealer, but museums are not devoid of even such specimens. True, "crude drugs" were often, very crude, indeed.

Today scientific medicine demands better remedial agents. In spite of synthetic new remedies, turned out almost every day of the year, medicinal plants still supply nine of the most important remedies. Morphine, today, prepared from the opium poppy, originates from churches back, and the source is not venia. True, Wisconsin does not produce any of the medicinal plants yielding these drugs. But only last winter a physician, in distress, telegraphed to the Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Experiment Station for digitalis, raised in the pharmaceutical garden. He had tested all kinds of digitalis and its properties. Not last, but failed to find results. The Wisconsin digitalis "did the work" as he wrote later. But digitalis should be pharmacologically tested before it is used as such or converted into other remedial forms of administration.

Before the war, stramon, an important anesthetic produced from a plant grown in India, sold for about $2.00 a pound. During the war the price went up to $15.00 and even $20.00. Yet these grows in this state a plant so abundantly, if harvested, possibly the entire United States might be supplied with stramon. It is a weed avoided even by cattle and sheep because of its antibiotic constituent.

The rational utilization of the plant should be made a subject of the re-evaluation of early waste land of which our state has more than enough. It should be coupled with reforestation, with the extension of agriculture, with agriculture. It could be made to supplement the production of potato alcohol as an agricultural industry.

Enough has possibly been said to make it clear that the collection of medicinal plants is not a pet-riek-quick scheme, neither does it follow that the farmer who has successfully raised wheat or corn will make a success with medicinal plants. To raise a crop for the most part, does not suffice. The Michigan farmer who does not know how to drill his potatoes after he has harvested the crop, will scarcely make a success. Similarly, the farmer's wife who knows of "herbs on acres" of winter-grown, will not realize over the prospective crop money when she offers

SESQUICENTENNIAL HISTORY SKETCHES

The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence will be observed by the Sesquicentennial International Exposition, which opens at Philadelphia, June 1, 1926.

George Clymer, Signer

A true leader of Revolutionary days was of service to his country (as far as he possessed money and diverse talents and made use of them all). Such a man was George Clymer, one of the Pennsylvania signers of the Declaration of Independence, which will be celebrated in Philadelphia, by the Sesquicentennial International Exposition, extending from June 1 to December 1.

Aside from many offices and committee appointments which he was called upon to fill as a statesman, George Clymer is known as a founder of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Society, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the Pennsylvania Bank.

He was a member of the Continental Congress in 1776, 1777 and in 1781. With Richard Stockton, he was appointed to inspect the Northern Army at Monmouth on September 26, 1776. In December of the same year, when the approach of the British forced Congress to flee to Lancaster, the Pennsylvania signer was one of the commissioners left in Philadelphia to attend to the public interests.

Text, devotion and honesty are some of the virtues which characterized the man who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Yet aside from the benefit to suffering humanity that comes from the scientific utilization of medicinal plants and the proper treatment of the crop when harvested, financial returns may likewise be expected if the present is attacked in the right spirit and in the right way. For the present, however, these problems are such as call for the cooperation of the state with private enterprise. In Wisconsin people wait for another year to see what can be done. We can learn the lesson of preparation.

AT THE MAZOMANIE THEATRE

History, they say, repeats itself, and the movies illustrate the truth of the statement. Some ten years ago Henry Walthall made cinema history in a remarkably dramatic scene for Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" as the "Little Colonel." The other day he was required to play an almost exact duplicate of his scene in "The

Your Sheep Deserve Attention

The Horn flock of sheep give two crops each year—horns and wool.

As time goes on, progressive farmers are planning a better business on the industry of sheep than ever before. The case they are given. It is generally realized that a sheep raiser receives more from his flock than from the wool. All indications point to a well maintained flock for both and mention due to the fact that a sheep can be sold for more than the wool it produces. A flock of sheep can be sold for more than the wool it produces. A flock of sheep can be sold for more than the wool it produces.

When compared with other live stock, sheep raising provides a profitable source of cash income. They lamb once a year, and the lambs are ready for market in June and when the wool is harvested and sold in June and July, the raiser is received at a two-in-one crop. He is not the average farmer. Those who raise sheep have been known to average $1000 a year. In one instance, he was reported to have sold a flock of 100 sheep at 40 cents a head for a total of $4000. The best record from the 10 ewes averaged a total of $1000.

The Blue Bird Says

A man was arrested in Idaho for selling whiskey to the Indians. That was about to be the end of the story, but the man who was selling whiskey to the Indians is dead in this country.

One thing the bootleggers never have to worry about—a huperia. Study in American universities is not endangered as much by base ball as by high heels. Uncle Sam's "rolling out" is not entirely a success. Scrambling the egg doesn't help if there is a bad one among the lot. As soon as a farmer can afford to be a man, he can afford it. He gets himself a country place.
