of the fort in 1832. Following is the inscription on the tablet:

"Site of Blue Mounds fort. Built in May, 1832, by miners and settlers of the neighborhood and garrisoned by them as volunteer members of General Henry Dole's Iowa-Michigan brigade from May 20 to September 20, 1832, during the Blackhawk war. The site was donated to the State Historical society of Wisconsin by the heirs of Colonel Ebenezer Brigham, pioneer settler of Blue Mounds, who helped to build the fort. Dedicated September 5, 1921, by the society."

Blue Mounds Fort was an important place in the lead region during the Blackhawk war. It served as a half-way station between Fort Winnebago (Portage) and Fort Crawford (Prairie du Chien). The fort was a refuge to the settlers and their families, a center of active military operations and the scene of the dramatic restoration to their white friends of the two unfortunate captives, Rachel and Sylvia Hall.

OBITUARY

Charles Butz.

Charles Butz, Sr., died on Wednesday morning, August 31, 1921, at the home of his son, Julius Butz, at On Thursday evening, August 25th, just after having returned from a pleasant visit, and while cheerful thoughts lay lightly on him, he fell and fractured his hip, and five days after, merciful death stilled his suffering. Although he often quoted the words, "Let me not live after my wick lacks oil to become the snuff of younger spirits," he lived to reach the stone that marks one of the highest points on life's highway. He was born in Parsleboro, Prussia, on November 11, 1829, and was ninety-one years, nine months and eleven days of age. After taking a university course, he took a special course in chemistry from 1846 to 1848. He then made a voyage around the world, and traveled extensively in Australia and South America. In 1852 he returned to Prussia. He came to the United States in 1853, and arrived in Mazomanie in 1857, a little in advance of the railroad. He opened a general store, and carried on business until 1882. On July 26th, 1886, he was married to Katherine Buhlman, at Sank City, Wis. After a brief residence at that place, they came to Mazomanie, where they lived since. His wife died two years ago, and four years ago they celebrated their diamond wedding, an event that comes only to a few.

He was, so far as known, the last one of his generation here. To impress his long life and residence he said, "Not a man or woman is living who was in Mazomanie when I came." "I have seen all there is of life from its sparkling shallows to its tragic depths." "I have seen kingdoms rise and kingdoms fall." "I have seen little children, born after I came to Mazomanie, grow to manhood and womanhood, and at last white with the snows of age pass to death, and I am here still." "How unpeopled and it is," he said, "how have all the people of one's generation gone?" "I feel, although everybody is good and kind to me, as though I sat alone by the wayside with a new world passing by that

His talks on his world travels and about Mazomanie's early days were interesting and instructive. He had an understanding heart for the wonders of nature. He never lost his interest in science. He said, "I have lived to see the world almost barren when I came, crowned with its many vast and marvelous achievements." Then he added, "But all the accomplished wonders, great as they are, are to the greater wonders yet to come only what a preface is to a book." His long life was remarkably and singularly free from bodily ailments, and a clear mind accompanied him to his end.

More than twenty years ago, he and three others, W. S. F. Smith, and Harry Willard, of Mazomanie, and W. W. Gilman, of Madison, Wis., made a trip down the Wisconsin river. In last month's "Wisconsin Conservationist," Mr. Gilman gives an account full of charm of that trip, and ends it thus: "Time of our party was then seventy years of age. We called him the Professor. In fact he was as young as any of us. For some months after our return, he carried on a correspondence with me, his end of it being in the form of poetical accounts of various incidents of the trip. He is still living, and, like the rest of us, wishes we might repeat the vacation." And now, so soon after the words "he is still living" were written, he has gone forever from this narrow vale that lies between the peaks of two eternities.

Who mourns for him, standing beside his grave, can truthfully say, "He who sleeps here never gave us a moment of pain."

The funeral services were held on Friday afternoon and were conducted by Rev. C. Zank, of the Reformed Lutheran church, of Sank City, assisted by Rev. Geo. V. R. Shepard, of the Community church, of this place. He is survived by four children: Mrs. H. A. Partridge, of Sank City; Mrs. C. F. Hensley, of Ellensburg, Wash.; and Julius and Charles Butz, of this place. * One son, Otto, was drowned on June 26th, 1884. He also leaves four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Among those in attendance at the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Christ, Laura, Linda and Anna; Mrs. Fanny Knobloch, Mrs. Fred Gumbel, of Madison; Jacob and Aubrey Buhlman, of Waunakee; and Mrs. John Schutte, of Barneveld.

Card of Thanks.

To all neighbors and friends who assisted us during the illness and burial of our father, we herewith extend our sincere thanks.

The Family.

Hunger, the Best Sauce.

Sauce is used to create an appetite of relish for the food. The right way is to look to your digestion. When you have a good digestion you are certain to relish your food. Chamberlain's Tablets improve the digestion, create a healthy appetite and cause a gentle movement of the bowels.

Fired For Getting Married.

Mrs. Elsie Dickerhoff Thompson, a teacher for the last seven years in the public schools at Milwaukee, who was secretly married last March, was ousted from her position Wednesday by the superintendent. ### Warden Says Look Story True.

Press dispatches that Grace Lunk was to be released from Waupun on September 14 to plead her own pardon case before Gov. Blaine were declared to be untrue on Tuesday. Warden H. M. Cole, of the state prison, said late Tuesday afternoon that he had no information that Miss Lunk would be temporarily released. A precedent, long established in the state, has not allowed prisoners to plead their own cases before the governor.

MOVIES

FRIDAY, SATURDAY, SEPT. 9, 10.

William Fox presents the most famous and popular stage and screen star, WILLIAM FARNUM, with an all star cast of noted actors in "Heartsstrings," another one of the excellent Farnum Special photoplays, in multiple reels. Story by a popular author.

Also another one of those excellent Larry Simon comedies, entitled "Solid Concrete" in two parts. An extra big special program you all will enjoy to its finish. Management of the Majestic is proud to have that "Solid Concrete" is one of the best comedies on the market, and this picture is a sure success.

Instead of the big photoplays, don't miss seeing Larry; he surely is a big screen star.

Admission 15c and 25c. War tax paid.

SUNDAY, MONDAY, SEPT. 11 and 12.

Samuel Goldwyn and Rex Beach present Rex Beach's famous story, "The Silver Horde," in seven stirring parts, with an all star cast of America's most noted players. "The Silver Horde," Mr. Beach's most powerful story of the Alaskan snow country. The might of the north against the cunning of Wall Street. And the fight that followed resounded with the crash of its mighty data, pulsated with the unheated passions of strong men fighting for fortune and the love of a woman.

Action? Thrills? Romance? Well, Rex Beach wrote it. It's a crash of a story. Another photoplay like "The Spiders," "Riders of the Purple Sage," "Rainbow Trail," and "The River's End." You have seen all of these. Don't miss "The Silver Horde." Come early and avoid the rush, for good seats are limited. The Majestic considers itself very fortunate in being able to book this excellent picture, as September 11th and 12th were the only open dates available.

A dandy two-part comedy goes with this program.

Admission 15c and 25c. War tax paid.

TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 12, 13.

Goldwyn Special Features presents the most comical name on the screen today, "BILL ROGERS," a full star cast of noted players, in "Almost a Husband." Story by Ogle Reed, and directed by C. B. De Munn.

"Almost a Husband" is told in a small Arkansas town downy existing along the sleepy banks of the old Mississippi, where the up-bouts is cause for excitement. Nothing ever happened there until Sam Lyman, the new school master from "up Vermont way" hit the town. Then things began to happen. Don't miss our first Bill Rogers picture. We have booked six of these, and they are all dandy programs, all five and six reel comedy dramas.

A Star Universal comedy for good measure.

Admission 15c and 25c. War tax paid.

Quickgrass, once a pestiferous foe of the farmer, is now a carefully nourished crop. A Minnesota county farm agent has reported that farmers are receiving as high as fifty cents a pound for the roots of quickgrass. It makes a powerful beverage, guaranteed to make a cow kick, a duck quack, or a weasel weal.

All signs point to a hard winter, say nature observers in the middle west. Black martens have already begun their migration southward; clouds of them may be seen flying along the shores of Lake Michigan—Indiana at Birchwood, Wis., say animal pets are heavier than for many years. Wild geese killed recently have unusually thick breastbones. Wisconsin farmers report corn husks to be very heavy.

Disbursements for highways and schools in Wisconsin constitute 55% of all public expenditures, which during the last year totaled $12,768,910, the state tax commission pointed out in its monthly bulletin, last week. According to the same source of information, the expenditures for general government, including salaries and expenses of the several executive, judicial, legislative and administrative departments, both state and local, constitute 6.6% of the total disbursements.

There was a charivari at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. O'Hara, Wednesday evening, brought about by the rumor that their son, Raphael, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Oetia Humphreys, of Minneapolis, Minn., were recently married at the latter city, the presence of both bride and groom at the O'Hara home the first of the week seemingly verifying the rumor. An inquiry brought forth the information from the groom that they were married September 12, 1920—a year ago—and that the marriage had not been announced publicly. Mrs. O'Hara left for Minneapolis, Wednesday (before the charivari), and Mr. O'Hara returns to Washington today.

The right of wire companies, either private or municipal, to trim shade trees in front of homes has been questioned so many times of late, that the opinion given out by Attorney General Morgan will be a most welcome one. Said official holds that under existing law no municipality has a right to trim trees for the convenience of electric or telephone companies, and owners of homes cannot be forced to either trim or cut trees for the convenience of such companies. If property owners insist upon their rights in this matter, the underground system will soon be in general use.

Disorders of the bowels are extremely dangerous, particularly during the hot weather of the summer months, and in order to protect yourself and family against a sudden attack, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It can be depended upon. Many have testified to its excellence.

Cotton Jumps $10 a Bale. The most remarkable exhibition of strength in the history of cotton trading, according to experts, was given on the New Orleans exchange, Wednesday, when all months in the future markets closed $10 a bale over Tuesday's close.

A PAPER MILLIONAIRE

Man Who Knew the Ropes Talked Common Sense.

By EDGAR TAYLOR WHELOCK. (Copyright, 1921, American Trust Estates.) Some years ago a young man had realized a profit on a small real estate deal applied for advice to his employer, a man of many millions who was noted for taking chances on new enterprises. The young man was considering making an investment in the stock of a company which was about to develop a mining claim.

"Can You Afford to Lose?" asked the employer. The amount was stated, the total being but a few hundred dollars.

"Can you afford to lose it?" was the next question. "No," the young man replied; "it is all I have except my salary."

"Come with me," the financier said. He led the young man to a vault for joining the office where accountants and clerks were at work and pointed to a pine box in a corner.

"That box is full of mining and oil stock," he remarked. "It is the accumulation of about twenty-five years of speculation and the par value of the stock aggregates several million dollars. Of course, I did not buy it at its par value; some of it cost me about what you are asked to pay for the stock you are thinking of buying and some of it less. If it is mining stock you want, you can hire an express wagon to cart the box and its contents to your home and you will be a paper multimillionaire, for you can have it if you will take it away."

"My advice to you, however, is to keep out of mining and oil stock investments until you have accumulated enough capital so that you can afford to lose, for the chances are about 100 to 1 that you will lose."

Go Slow and Play Safe. "Put your money in investment securities, bonds recommended by some reliable bank, trust company or financial house."

"The time will come, it always does, when you will have an opportunity to invest in some business with which you are familiar and in which you will have something to say about the management. Keep your money where you can control it; don't give it to strangers to play with. "I can afford to take chances, for in the long run I am ahead of the game, but you are not in my class and should play safe."

The young man took his employer's advice and a few years later held a substantial financial interest in a prosperous real estate firm.
