Card of Thanks.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to friends who so kindly remembered me with flowers, cards and other friendly messages during my stay at the hospital.

Mrs. Wm. Wilkinson, Sr.

We read in The International Book Review that in the past Mr. Coolidge's political success was in no small part due to his winsome wife. In the future, it will in no small part be due to his ability to winnote votes.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Jack L. Wood

Deep gloom was cast over this entire community when the message flashed over the wire that Amy Ellis Wood had listened to the call of her Heavenly Father, and gone home. She fell asleep under the surgeon's care to awake in the land of the blessed, where her father and mother and a sister awaited her coming.

Mrs. Wood was born in Mazomanie, July 21, 1878, on the spot where the Ellis home now stands in a house which later gave place to the present home, and Mazomanie was ever one of the dearest spots of earth to her. Her academic education was gained in the public schools of Mazomanie, which work was finished in 1895. To this preparation for her life work, she added two years and two summer sessions at the University of Wisconsin, and a sufficient amount of work at the Milwaukee Normal to complete the course and was granted a diploma from that institution.

Mrs. Wood began her work as a teacher in the primary grades of her native town in 1897 and continued to direct the lives of Mazomanie's little ones for seventeen years, after which long term of service, she went to Leavenworth, South Dakota and taught for one year, then returned to Waukegan, Wisconsin for one year, at the expiration of which time she enrolled as one of Madison's earnest workers with children, and she had completed seven years in this work when the Reaper summoned her, August 26, 1924. It was her deep consecration to her chosen work which induced her to submit to the operation that proved fatal. Her earnest desire being, as she said, "To be ready for the opening of school." No effort was ever too great for her to make if it would further the best interests of her work, or the welfare of those she loved. The tribute paid to the character of her work by her superintendent, Thomas Goelz, is that Madison has lost one of her best teachers.

June Gertrude Ellis was married August 18, 1920, to Jack L. Wood, in the home of her brother Archie, in this village, and then was begun a union of two lives which seemed to have reached completeness when Mr. and Mrs. Wood moved into their new home at 115 Lakeside street, Madison, on February 1, of this year. There is left to the bereaved husband the memories of the few happy months spent in this home which had received so much of the thought and love of the one who is gone.

Early in life, Mrs. Wood became a follower of the Master, and in 1898, made public confession of her faith in His teachings by uniting with the Congregational church of Mazomanie, which had her loyal support until July, 1922, when she transferred her allegiance to the First Congregational church at Madison, her husband uniting with her in this new affiliation with the army of their King.

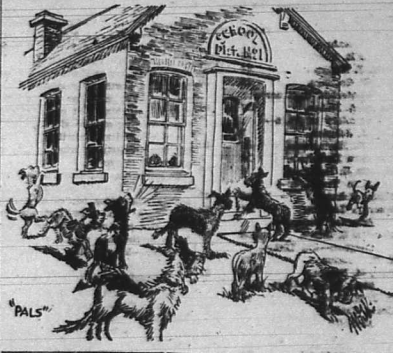

Mrs. Wood was very fond of all athletic sports, and so was compassionate in a high degree to her husband who has like tastes. Those who knew her and loved her best name as her chief characteristics, her warm hearted loyalty to loved ones and to her work; her courteous, generous nature; her cordial hospitality; her indomitable will which never admitted defeat however great the difficulties to be overcome. Think of the hundreds of lives that have been influenced by these characteristics and say not that her task is finished. It was hers to heed the Master's command.

"Strain toward the mighty ocean of God's love."

And I, the Master, waiting over there.

Will lend My strength to land the precious fare Which ye have toiled to win."

School's Open

"PALS"

And her life answered, "Lord Thou hast spoken, and I trust thy word."

I will push out and leave the safe, known land.

And count it full reward if, coming back,

Laden at nightfall across the waters black,

I see Thee on the strand."

The remains were brought to the old home the evening of August 27, and the funeral was held from that place Thursday, August 28, at 2:30 p. m. Rev. Theodore Partle, Madison, state superintendent of Congregational work in Wisconsin, officiating. Interment was made in the Mazomanie cemetery.

Her husband, her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Ellis, and many other relatives and friends will mourn the loss of this dear wife, sister, friend. The many beautiful floral offerings with their silent messages of sympathy, made easier the laying away of the loved one. The pall bearers were: H. W. Jones, Gayle Emery, Dr. J. C. Schell, George Greene, Charlie Davies and H. E. Trager.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mrs. Marie King of Felda, Minn.; Miss Sophie Booth, Mrs. J. D. Madison, Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Ellis, Sparta; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Madison and family, Lodi; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Ellsworth, Avoca; Mrs. John Pine, Avoca; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Longfield, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Page, E. N. Warner, Princeton, Wis.; Mrs. Eldred, Mrs. Schellrup, Mrs. Mary Shotts and daughter, Miss Nellie, Miss Eva Morgan and Miss Bronham, Madison; Miss Mildred Anderson, of McFarland; Dr. Froeggett and family, of Cross Plains.

Card of Thanks.

We most sincerely thank the many friends who ministered to us in the time of our great sorrow.

WOMAN-PROOF

by GEORGE ADE

No girl was going to sting him No Sir!

Yes, it's true. Tommy's absolutely "Woman-Proof" in this picture. That is—er, well, it must have a happy ending. But there's many a solid laugh, many a clever twist and heart-clutching situation before his heart is captured at last.

Beemen To Harvest Normal Honey Crop

Wisconsin's 12,000 beekeepers are fairly sure of 10,000,000 pounds of honey this season.

The early part of the season was very backward, and the prospects for even a small crop of honey looked slim. Then the weather warmed up and became ideal honey-making weather for the bees.

The ten million pounds of honey is about what the average honey crop runs in the Badger state. For this amount of honey the beemen receive in the neighborhood of $100,000.

MAZOMANIE, WIS., SEPT. 5, 1924

August of 1906 Was Wetter Than This One

August, 1924, is not the wettest in history. For eighteen years ago, August, 1906, had a rainfall of 1.56 inches in comparison with 7.25 inches this year, according to the records of the U. S. Weather Bureau at the University of Wisconsin, of which Eric R. Miller is chief.

In fact the period between January 1 and July 31, 1924, is characterized by a deluge in rainfall of 1.1 inches, in comparison with the average for the same period. A comparatively dry spring offset the heavy rainfall of the summer months.

In the opinion of a Scotch meteorologist, based upon all the data he can gather, a rainfall of 8.81 inches for the month of August is a practical impossibility. He bases this statement on the following facts: The average amount of rainfall for the month is 3.21 inches, and the standard of deviation is 1.49; a deviation of four times the standard or 5.96 inches is almost non-existent, therefore 5.96 inches plus 3.21 inches cannot happen.

The chances of twice the standard of deviation occurring are 21 against 1 and of three times, 370 against 1. Hence the present August has made one of the 21 chances for doubling the amount of rainfall, no very great record at all.

Would Pour Oil On Untroubled Waters.

They, too, take to the tall grass. Mosquitoes, which with their piercing stiletto-like beaks are gathering their toll of Badger blood, hide away in waste places.

One way to help do away with the mosquito pest, according to H. F. Wilson, of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture staff, is to keep the tall grass and weeds about the home cut. It is in the shady places that the mosquito likes to harbor during the daytime. Also, see to it that stagnant water is not left about for the pests to utilize for hatching.

Wilson says, "The recent long wet spell and the several cool days were the ideal conditions for those pests to hatch out by the trillions wherever there were puddles, barrels of rain water, or any other body of still water which was left unmolested."

"Mosquitoes in some parts of the country, especially in the south where the pest carries disease, such as yellow and malaria fevers, are controlled by pouring oil over the water in which they hatch."

"About the best remedy to rub on the face and hands to ward away the stinging pests," says Wilson, "is oil of Citronella."

The insect expert relates the theory of the itching caused by the mosquito bite. "When the mosquito bites, it injects into the wound a secretion which tends to break up the tissues so that the mosquito is able to absorb the blood. The secretion is also the cause of the soreness and the itching."

"Most everyone has seen the wrigglers in the rain barrel," related Wilson. "Well, those little swimmers are the larvae of the mosquito. Federal laws have even a boat-like shaped mass on the surface of the water, and flies away, leaving them to hatch. Several days later the wrigglers break through the lower part of the egg and plunge into the water. There they swim about in search of food until ready to shed their skin. The shedding of the skin takes place at the surface of the water, and as the skin breaks open, the young mosquito remains at the surface to let its wings become hardened then away it flies in search of blood."

Winning the Barbary War.

Observers who have traveled extensively over the spring wheat country of the Northwest states report little evidence of the black stem rust of grain which science has traced to common barberry as source and cause. It is easy to draw large conclusions from small premises, but it seems fair to say that the comparative freedom of the wheat fields from black stem rust is a fruit of the militant fight carried on in the North Central states to uproot and destroy barberry bushes. Federal and state governments have aided in the extermination of this rust breeding pest, but the main credit goes to the farmers who, convinced that the scientists were right, set themselves to the business of clearing their places of barberry.

Tremendous ravages have been made on the wheat fields of the Northwest from year to year by rust. The loss in the last few years has been estimated at scores of millions of dollars. Rust reduces both yield and quality, thereby cutting two ways into the farmer's pocketbook.

It looks today as if the fight on barberry was worth many times what it cost in time, muscular energy and money. Anything that contributes to the increasing of acre yields in farm crops is abundantly worth while; and more particularly so when quality of product is improved.

The war on barberry is not yet over, although many estimated victories and major battles against it have been won. Conditions in the fields this year should act as a spur for a continuance of the eradication campaign.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Wilson says, "The recent long wet spell and the several cool days were the ideal conditions for those pests to hatch out by the trillions wherever there were puddles, barrels of rain water, or any other body of still water which was left unmolested."

MALMAISON

When Napoleon's ambition led him to divorce the unfortunate Josephine, the unhappy empress retired to 'Malmaison,' a country house a short distance from Paris. 'Malmaison' means 'an happy house.' It was in the garden of this estate that the famous portrait of the empress was painted. Malmaison is now a museum where illustrious relics of the great Corsican are preserved.
