Wife and Husband Both Ill With Gas

"For years I had gas on the stomach. The first dose of Adierika helped. I now sleep well and all gas is gone. It also helped my husband." (Signed) Mrs. B. Brinkley. GAF spoonful Adierika removes GAS and often brings astonishing relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Brings out old waste matter you never thought was in your system. This excellent intestinal evacuant is wonderful for constipation.—Geo. A. Shields, Druggist.

LEGISLATIVE SIDELIGHTS

By O. D. Brandenburg

Madison. Two episodes, both involving mysterious phases, have horrified the capital city the past few days, awakening wide and startled comment. Allusion is had to the suicide of young W. C. Noe, 20 year old son of one of the foremost doctors of Madison, and to the murder by W. M. Coffey of his illegitimate wife. Just what set Noe off is almost inexplicable. A suicide pact is suggested; and a written message that he would return to spirit on two days named and make his presence manifest to a fraternity brother indicates another motive. An intimate friend, John Moore of Oak Park, whom he had recently visited, actually did take his own life, since "there was nothing further to live for" and the circumstances evoked various observations from Noe, as from others, but none of special significance, though it is reported that they promised to communicate with each other after death. This much I do know—that the Noes are the sanest people possible, and I have known two generations, including this little father and his maternal grandparents. Never had there been a sign of aberration; and the boy was notably normal, an honorable, clean, frank, fine fellow. He neither drank nor was a drug addict; and no romantic entanglement existed. He was just a clean, nice, handsome, courteous chap, such as any Madison Noe was sure to be. His university studies embraced the mental sciences, which tend to take one's feet off the earth into the mysticisms of dreamland; and right here I am reminded of a graduate of Vassar who came to our university about ten years ago to pursue post graduate studies in sociology and psychology and was found dead, frozen rigid, poor girl, a suicide pistol at her side, near an old stone quarry a mile west of the university. In a letter to me the president of Vassar College, explaining the girl highly for her fine abilities, and he could suggest no plausible reason for her tragic act. Her father, as I recall, was a banker in one of the lesser cities on the Hudson river. After all, what monumental egotism may characterize the suicide, as in Noe's case? Not long before the tragedy Noe had remarked to a sister that a good photograph of himself should be ready for the press as something was to happen soon to make the family famous! Not a thought of the heart-breaking of parents who had lavished upon him twenty years of tenderest devotion—only of notoriety and publicity! Doesn't it fairly make the heart sick!

Of the psychological side of the Noe case Rev. Norman C. Kimball, rector of the University Episcopal chapel, who was a close friend of the Noe family, has this to say: "The effect of psychology, defining life, entirely in mechanistic terms, was to weaken and destroy Noe's devotion to religion. Noe's studies, principally psychology, upset his religious convictions, even though there is probably nothing in psychology itself to cause him to commit suicide. Much of that which is learned in psychology and other courses would tend to remove the inhibitions which other wise would have probably prevented him from taking his life. Religion, teaching that suicide is fundamentally wrong and instructing its believers in the importance of life, provides the inhibitions to suicide and make life worth while. The psychology that Noe imbibed was supplemented by a suicide obsession, caused by the suggestion of another, to make Noe temporarily unbalanced. Noe was a boy of singularly fine character, devoted to his family, steady in his habits, always cheerful and considerate in disposition. However, the inconsistency between his temporary mechanistic ideas, which are the natural expression of a behavioristic psychology and his assurance of an ability to come back in spirit necessarily point to a mind momentarily unbalanced. In that mind the idea of suicide, once suggested, has grown into an obsession."

"Coffey, too, I know, a stocky man considerably under six feet, of smooth, smiling countenance, fluent and correct in conversation. Some ten years ago he had an office near my building, and to sleeping there in rather unclean fashion, and with disapproval. He did not last long, and when one year ago I met him at a mid-winter picnic in a Devils Lake cottage, where he was a casual guest, I had wholly forgotten him, nor did he take the trouble to reveal his identity as a former tenant. Possibly he had left rent unpaid. The most I recall of the take occurrence is several stories he told of physical encounters with desperate criminals, one not long before on a depot platform at Elroy or somewhere in that region. They were tales whose plausibility was accepted readily. Indeed, Coffey's occupation was "rehabilitating" released convicts—therefore his common contact and association was with the criminal class. It is not difficult to believe that such relationship may have awakened evil tendencies that finally found expression in bigamy, forgery, murder. Sympathy for the excellent Mrs. Coffey and her two worthy children in universal here, their home.

President Glenn Frank is piquantly apt in phraseology. A great road meeting was held in Madison the past week, and the caption of a timely article by Dr. Frank is "The New Highwayman". But, he means it the other way, for he says of these road makers that they have built a new kind of civilization. Here, for instance, are some of the things in my chronicle to the credit of the men who have developed American highways and highway transportation.

LEGISLATIVE SIDELIGHTS

By O. D. Brandenburg

They have saved rural communities from the isolation that starts with roads and shrivels their spirits. They have made possible the development of rural mail service. They have rendered the parcel post service possible. They have made possible a reduction in the cost of getting farm products to and from finished goods from railroad shipping points. They have made the educational and cultural influences of America available to wider and wider areas. They have, as a by-product of the prosaic business of building roads, transformed the living conditions, the thought, the culture, and the life of the American people.

"The man who sees the spiritual by-products of his business or profession qualifies the joy of living," is Dr. Frank's concluding philosophy.

This really ought to be an administration distinguished by much piety since Governor Zimmerman's wife is the daughter of a minister and Secretary of State Damman's father was a clergyman.

Critics of the Jacksonian sweep of Governor Zimmerman's broad must not forget that in his campaign the prospective governor, time and again, solemnly promised a house-cleaning if elected. He is merely keeping faith, but a remarkable circumstance is that he is not consciously applying the brush to so-called progressives. They occupied all the offices before, and they occupy them all still, possibly not the same progressives, yet progressives just the same. If a sincere conservative has been played or placated, please name him. He is not recorded in my address book.

Lawrence colleges fairly scintillate in this legislature, three of its brilliant alumni occupying seats in the assembly. They are Chester D. Seftenberg, 22, who won the election from the Oshkosh district of Winnebago county five days after his twenty-second birthday; Oscar J. Schmeckel, of Outagamie county, 22 years old, and Paul Ungrodt, 26, of Bayfield county. Ungrodt only recently finished a three-year term as mayor of Winnetka. He defeated three opponents, all older and more experienced politicians than himself. Seftenberg, who ran as an independent, received the largest majority ever given an assembly candidate in the Oshkosh half-jerk, while Schmeckel's plurality set a record for Outagamie county. All won high honors at Lawrence and all are among the youngest of solons. They promise to do honor to their alma mater.

Ten years or more ago during a boyish rough-house in the assembly, Rev. A. E. Frederick, representing the Monroe county district, playfully shield a booklet into the office and, as a consequence Assemblyman D. J. Vincent of Kenosha county lost an eye. Much of the time since then Frederick has been state humane officer. The accident, terribly unfortunate, aroused so much indignation that, two years ago, the modest salary was extracted from the law. Now comes a bill for its restoration. Mr. Frederick, a beside-billing several rural pulpits regularly, has been excommunicating old humane duties gratuitously. He has a crusader's zeal, but while the suffering Vincent languished in a local hospital he failed to call sympathetically, and that omission hurt. If perchance the salary bill should fail, we shall understand that it still hurts. Vincent, gray, lean, sharp-featured, reminds one of the stern and heroic life of the revolution.

Altogether the swiftest evolution in recent politics is the separation of John T. Donaghey from the influential position of state highway engineer that, incidentally, denotes a pay of $7,500. He is replaced by H. J. Kuelitz, who, a scholastic engineer of long service, was in the highway department for many years during the Hirst regime. Now he comes back to a sphere which, some argue, should have been his when Hirst left. Exactly what lies at the bottom of this sensational mutation one may not know, but when a commission of five members voted 3 to 1 for a change must one not believe there is a reason? Here again is a progressive succeeding a progressive, but Kuelitz is a Zimmerman progressive and Donaghey is not. I allude to the episode with diffidence but I do not forget that at a meeting last fall Zimmerman, while speaking in Watworth county, was heckled a bit by Donaghey—at least, certain statements of the future governor relating to highway matters were questioned.

The incident was of no large importance except as possibly disclosing factional bias, and Zimmerman was fighting alone for his very life.

Sen. John C. Schumann of Watworth has introduced a bill forbidding a member of the legislature from holding any other state job. It's a sound measure. Offices are quite as potent as money for controlling legislation, even though their employment may be a little less raw.

Speaker Eber's bill eliminating speed limits for automobiles being sharply penalizing reckless driving ought to pass, and the like of it will before many years. There is not much sense in regulating speed when no danger lies in the fairway.

Is there an older editor in Wisconsin than M. P. Rindlaub of the Platteville Witness? He is 89. However, he has put aside the pastepot, the pencil, scissors, shooting-stick, but clings affectionately to his Masonic emblem. The Masonic Veterans Association of Chicago, organized in 1890, recently "hailed and honored him as the most venerable living patriarch of the order." Mr. Rindlaub is chiefly responsible for the preservation of the first Wisconsin capitol at Belmont, Grant county.

Gentlemen: I wish to take an offer. I am enclosing the above coupon to your paper and I wish you to send me a copy of that things had saved her from corruption, perhaps from total ruin, the nation swung to the other extreme. Foster Charles II. gave, frantically and extravagantly held away, and Cromwell was denounced as a usurper. It is hard to form a just idea of Oliver Cromwell. He was the first great republican, and the first Englishman to exploit successfully a government for and by the people. He also built up a political machine and system of bossism that is unsurpassed. His severity may be partially forgiven when we remember that through that severity alone he was able to hold in check the many unquiet elements in his realm. He was the last and greatest of the Puritans; and with him died the physical power of puritanism in England. He and puritanism were the strong, digested medicine which alone could cure his country's debilitated "body politic." His treatment of Ireland was unparadise. His government of England was almost ideal.

Opportunities Here For Thrifty Farmers

"This country offers splendid opportunities for the man with small capital," says Ernest G. Herbold, of Morris-town, just east of Lemmon, South Dakota, "if he is a thrifty, hardworking fellow. It is a healthy climate. For cattle and horses our grass for pasturing cannot be beat. It is great for milk production. Young stock does fine."

Mr. Herbold came out here with $200 capital, and now owns and farms 320 acres. He averages in bushels per acre, 20 wheat, 40 oats, 35 to 50 corn, and 40 to 45 barley. Feeding can be done at low cost in alfalfa and sweet clover pasture, hogged off corn.

He raises chickens, and all garden crops, including beans, turnips, beets, pumpkins, cucumbers, tomatoes, lettuce and watermelons.

"We have every bit the same service as on high-priced land back East—such as daily mail, telephone, good roads, good water, cheap fuel, a good school."

Fine opportunities like this are available in South Dakota and Montana for experienced farmers. For full information write to H. F. Hunter, Agricultural Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., Union Station, Chicago.

It's figured out that on the average people spend 20% of their income on clothes.

If wearing apparel takes one-fifth of all the money you can earn, it's plain that you should buy wisely.

You know the location of our bank by heart. It's as profitable for you to keep in mind the location of our store. The bank helps you save money, and so do we help save you money on the merchandise you buy of us.

Mr. Laubmeyer of Plain was here again with his family this week to stock up on clothes. He said he had been coming for 15 years. And his wife spoke up and said he would come here to buy his clothes if he had to swim the river.

It's much better to see our clothes than to read about them. What the eye sees is retained ten times as well as what the ear hears or what you read.

Another lot of Women's dressy Pumps The kind smart Peaches wear for parties and formal occasions. It pays to be good to your feet. It may be that a woman's hair is the crowning glory, but, after all, it's her feet that get her there.

Those subject to frequent "colds in the head" will find that the use of HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will build up the System, cleanse the Blood and render them less liable to colds. Repeated attacks of Acute Catarrh may, however, result in Chronic Catarrh. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the Blood, the Mucous Surfaces of the System, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.
